AROUND THE FARM.

Items of Great Interest to the Farmers.

In picking pears always aim to leave the stem on the pear.

An improved farm invites industry and the love of agriculture, while money invites expenditures and bad habits.

If fowls have plenty of good sharp grit their food will not sour and they will get on very well without charcoal. Grit is prevention charcoal is cure.

Fill your hotbeds with littler in the fall so that the ground will not freeze. Replace this with manure in the spring and the planting can proceed without delay.

Do not forget the dust bath. This is to poultry what the bath is to person. With dust the fowls clean their bodies, drive away vermin and exercise themselves.

Cattle will eat almost any amount of grain if given a chance, but there is a limit to the amount they can digest, and this marks the limit of profit in grain feeding.

The manscript record of the great dairy test consists of about twenty-four thousand colums, containing two and one-half millions of figures according to Alward.

If not already done, it is now time to cut out all the old stalks among the raspberrses. Leave but three or four of the strongest of the canes and treat the rest as weeds.

The producer should carefully study just what the market demands and try to excel in conforming to that demand and put the product on the market with the most attractive appearance.

It is authoritatively stated that this whitepine of the North west is so nearly exhausted that there is practically no further supply for timber.

We have certainly reached the point where timber culture holds out a fair promise of profit.

The benefit resulting from the prunning of trees and vines, and the pinching back of succous and tomatoes, has led to experiments with potatoes. It is said that prunning them to two stalks in each hill has produced larger tubers and a great yield.

Some dairymen practice sucking direct from the churn, doing away with the working. More moisture is retained in the butter when this is done, also more casein; consequently the butter develops flavor quicker; it also become rancid sooner.

The wild chestnut is rich in flavor and sweet. A number of varieties are propogated by budding and grafting and show much improvement.

Why not devote large tracts to them, and have a valuable product in the nuts, and still further value in the timber?

A pinched-back raspberrry becomes self-supporting and needs no staking, if the work be done as soon at the young cane reaches the proper height. It is probable that if pinched off late in the season, a few branches only would come out near the top, which would make it top heavy.

To prevent head lettuces from going to seed prematurely a German paper advises to cut half through the stalk, just at the surface of the ground, with a sharp knife. The remaining half of the stalk allows the passage of sufficient sap while the plant alive, but not enough for mash future growth.

Judicious rotation of crops is thought to be the best precaution against club-root. Cabbage or any allied crops should not be put on the same soil oftener than once in three years If lime is frequently applied, or if the soil abounds in it, this question of rotation will not need to be so strictly regarded.

The tin cans filled with sweetened water, and placed at various points in the orchard of the Oklahoma Experiment Station, proved very efficient bug traps.

Several hundred Map beetles, crickets and grasshoppers were caught. This plan of utilising these hitherto useless article is fully justified by results.

MR. J. A. MORRIS,

525 East Broad Street, Richmond, Va.

DEAR SIR—It gives me Pleasure heartily to endorse the Harrison Anti-Dyspeptic Mineral Water. I have used a great deal of it in my practice with much benefit to my patients and satisfaction to myself. It has a right to the claims it makes upon the public confidence and patronage. As a diuretic, it has no equal. Very Respectfully,

WM. B. GRAY, M. D.

SPECIAL HOUSE-CLEANING SALE

BEFORE STOCK TAKING

TWO WEEKS HENCE!

A surplus is a good thing, but I'd rather swap a good deal of merchandise for a little money. It's expedient to sell now.

It's imperative—for if I wait I run the risk of breaking an iron-clad rule, and have some old stock to worry with next year. Losing is a bitter dose—but it doesn't help the taste of bitter medicine to sip it. Better to gulp it down, one wry face, and it's over. Take your choice of hundreds of my $20.00, $18.00, $16.50 or $15.00 Men's Suits or Overcoats.

My celebrated MELTON OVERCOATS that are so popular, and have been pronounced the best values ever sold in this section for $18.00 are in this House-cleaning sale for $11.80. Take advantage of the few days that are left before stock-taking and select one of these suits and one of these overcoats, the like of which cannot be bought for the money anywhere else on earth. All styles, all sizes.

OLD BUCKINGHAM.

THE GRAND OLD COUNTY PHOTOGRAPHED.

Many Interesting Reports Made of Her People.

Buckingham.

The closing exercises of the Mayeville High School took place in the Courthouse building on the night of the 26th of May and Prof. Dahl and Mrs. Bondurant showed how carefully they had trained their pupils for the occasion—there was not a hitch, not even from the little ones. The fan drill in which the youth and beauty of our community took part, was gone through with military precision and all was witnessed by one of the largest assemblages ever met on such an occasion here.

The teachers in this school deserve the unstinted praise they are receiving for the faithful, efficient manner in which they have conducted the school. Prof. Dahl seems the right man in the right place and Mrs. Bobdurant is one of the very best of teachers, having received her training at the Farmville Normal School.

Arrangements will be made for the coming season so that any citizen of Buckingham can send his children here and get board as cheap as it can be furnished, and if we need the third teacher one can be employed.

Society in the Mount Vinco neighborhood seems to have a valuable addition in the person of Mr. and Mrs. Hargrove, who have just moved to the ... farm, which they purchased from Mr. ... Mr. Hargrove is a ... and ... and ... and
